

Posting race documents (Revision 4)

Introduction

Documents for competitions and races can be published on GBSKI automatically as described below. This facility is available to those listed as 'officials' on the online calendar entry for each competition, and to the TD appointed to each race.

Email addresses

All race- and competition-related documents for publication should be sent to publish@gbski.com regardless of whether they are intended for automatic processing. Everything reaches the admin team anyway so anything that is not identified by the automated system will be dealt with manually.

For automatic publication, the files must be sent from an email address of one of those listed in the online calendar under 'Officials', or from the designated email address of the TD appointed to the event. Pre-race files such as bulletins might for example be sent by the Race Secretary, start lists by the Chief of Calculations, and final results by the TD.

If you are a competition official needing to publish files and your name does not appear on the calendar entry, or there is no email icon (✉) alongside your name, please contact admin@gbski.com to ask for the details to be added to the database.

Timescale

Files can be sent for automatic publication at any time before the competition takes place, and for a short period after it is complete (currently 7 days). For files relating to individual races (results, penalty calculations, etc.), they only be automatically published if the race is marked as awaiting results or reports, or is specifically set to allow late submission. After this, documents can only be published by the site administrators.

File Names

To allow files to be properly identified and assigned to the correct competition and/or race, they need to follow a strict file naming convention.

For competition-related files (invitations, bulletins, etc.) the first part of the file name must be the letter 'C' followed by the ID number of the competition, followed by the three-letter code for the type of file. You can find the ID number listed in the header 'bar' of the competition on the Calendar page, or as 'Competition ID' in the individual competition page.

| 22-Apr-17 (2 days) SSW Slalom & Excel [Pembrey, Gf R] C311 |                        |
|--|------------------------|
| Race Secretary   | Stephanie JONES, 01267 |
| Chief of Race  | Robin KELLEN, 02920 56 |
| Technical Delegate   | Derek METTERS (GBR) 6  |

For files related to individual races, these must be identified using their Codex number as listed on the calendar or competition page. The first part of the file name for these files is the three-letter code, followed by the codex number.

| Event | Type  | Gender | Codex |
|-------|-------|--------|-------|
| SL    | CN    | L      | 9210  |
| SL    | CN    | M      | 8210  |
| SL    | BEST2 | L      | 9211  |

Some examples:

C303ACC Acceptance bulletin English Alpine Champs 2017.pdf
RES9210 Champery Slalom Results.pdf

Where links to the published files are shown on the web site, the identifying prefix is not displayed, so you can use the rest of the file name to describe its contents in whichever way you want:

File Types

Automatic publication is only available for these files: PDF, SPRO, GIF, JPG, PNG. Other types of file will be passed through to the admin team for processing.

If your file is in Excel or Word format, it should be printed to PDF before being submitted for publication. There are many free PDF printers available on the Internet, such as PDFill (<https://www.pdfill.com/freewriter.html>). Windows 10 also has the 'Microsoft PDF Printer' built in, but this has been found to generate files that are much larger than those produced by other printers, so it is best avoided if possible.

File Name Codes

Codes to identify each type of file are listed here. Some only apply to competitions, others only to individual races.

|     |                                   |
|-----|-----------------------------------|
| ACC | Acceptance list/bulletin          |
| BAC | Backup time calculation           |
| BUL | Other bulletin                    |
| COM | Combined results                  |
| ENT | Entry form                        |
| INV | Invitation                        |
| MED | Event medical plan                |
| MIN | Jury minute                       |
| OFF | Official results                  |
| PEN | Penalty calculation               |
| PRO | Protest form                      |
| RES | Race results                      |
| STA | Start list                        |
| TCM | Programme (Team Captains Meeting) |
| TDR | TD report                         |
| TIM | Timing report                     |
| UNO | Unofficial results                |

If you find that you need to publish something that is not covered by the list above, tell the admin team and a new code can be created.

SkiPro files

SkiPro files for import into the database should still be sent to import@gbSKI.com. They will be assigned to the relevant race regardless of their file name; they don't need to be named with a special code because the Codex number is already in the SkiPro data.

Replacing and Removing files

Once published, you can post a new copy of the same file simply by sending it in again with the same file name. The existing copy will be over-written.

To remove a file, simply send it again, but this time set the subject of your email message to just the word “delete” (without the quotes). If the file you send matches one that already exists on the server then the online copy will be deleted.

For example, say you have already posted the first version of your invitation and want to replace that with a new version but with a slight different name so it is clear which version is currently online. Here are the steps in the process:

First email: Anything in subject, and attach “C489INV British Championships Invitation.pdf”.
This is how you published your original invitation.

Second email: The word “delete” in subject, and same attachment as above.
This will remove the original published invitation.

Third email: Anything in subject, and attach “C489INV British Championships Invitation V2.pdf”.
This will publish your revised invitation.

If you still have issues with removing documents, please email the details to publish@gbSKI.com and the admin team will deal with it for you.

Notification messages

When you publish documents, you should receive a response from the system telling you whether your files have been published or skipped.

The admin team is also notified about any attempts to interact with the automated publishing system, so they can track and sort out any problems sometimes before you even know that there is an issue.

If the sending email address is not that of the TD assigned to the competition or race, then the TD will also be notified that documents have been updated.
